

Player Handouts

Curse of Strahd · Session Prep IV · four props on aged paper. This page is for you — don't hand it out.

#	HANDOUT	WHEN	WRITE IN BY HAND FIRST
1	Strahd's letter (page 2) and its seal (page 3)	Start of the session. They've carried it sealed since Death House. They open it when they open it in the game.	—
2	Ethradir's mother's contract (page 4, top)	Scene 1, when Rose shows him the drawer	His mother's name on the line, and the year he was born
3	Lady Wachter's invitation (page 4, bottom)	Vallaki, day 1	—
4	The Festival notice (page 5)	Scene 4, pinned by the bar. Leave it on the table all through Vallaki.	—

PRINTING

- Print in colour at actual size (100%), not "fit to page". Thicker paper (120–160 gsm) makes the letter and the invitation card feel right.
- Cut each paper out along its own ragged edge. The white around it isn't part of the prop.
- Write the blanks on the contract with a brown or black pen, in your own hand.

MAKING STRAHD'S LETTER

- Fold the letter in three along the faint creases, writing inside.
- Wrap the band from page 3 around the folded letter and glue the plain end under the end with the seal. Or skip the band: cut out one of the loose seals and glue it across the letter's open edge.
- The players break the seal to open it: they tear the band, or peel the seal. Keep the spare seal for a second letter.

OPTIONAL AGEING

- Crumple the contract, flatten it, and rub the edges with a cold, used tea bag. Let it dry flat under a book.
- Leave the invitation card crisp and clean. Lady Wachter's paper is expensive.

My dear guests.

You have toured my valley with such energy that I would be a poor host not to receive you properly.

Dine with me. A carriage will wait for you at dusk.

You have my word that no harm will come to you under my roof tonight.

— S.

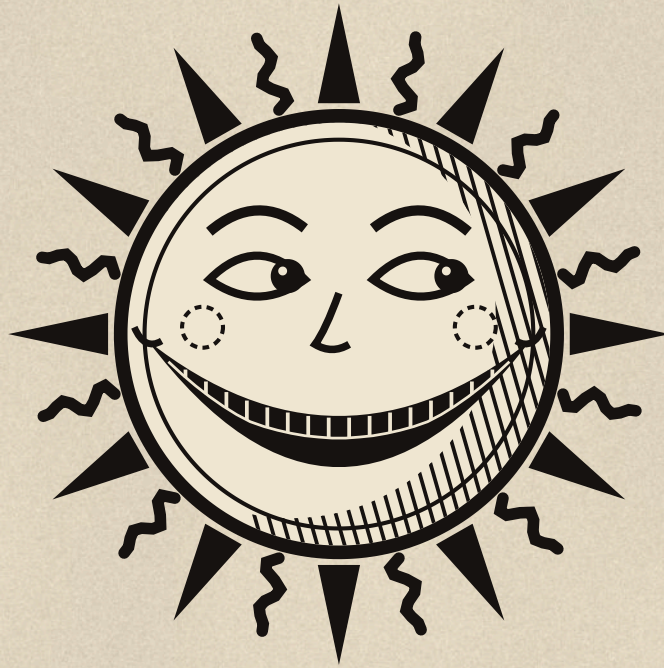

In the year _____

Let him live, and he is yours to call on.

BY ORDER OF THE BARON

The Festival of the Blazing Sun

Three days hence · in the square · at noon

ALL SHALL ATTEND AND REJOICE

The procession of the children · The Baron's address · The lighting of the sun

Smile, citizens! Unhappiness is forbidden.

Malcontents will be placed in the stocks.

Be indoors after dark. The gates stay shut till dawn.

All will be well!

Baron Vargas Vallakovich, Burgomaster of Vallaki